Celebrating the Past

The David C. Driskell Center is one of only a few art institutions named in honor of a living African American artist. As such, The Driskell Center is a leading research and study center for those interested in developing a broader and deeper understanding and appreciation of African American art.

Protecting the Legacy

The Driskell Center's mission is to document, collect, and preserve the rich legacy of African American art and visionary artists. By preserving these works and other archival material, the Driskell Center is positioned to share the full story of the American artistic journey. By securing and caring for the contributions of these artists, we ensure that they will never be forgotten.

Ensuring the Future

The Driskell Center provides educational opportunities for students, faculty, and the community at large while replenishing and expanding the field of African American art. Through joining the National Membership Program, you can share Professor Driskell's commitment to African American art and art history. Your membership provides you an opportunity to participate in protecting and ensuring this legacy for generations to come.
